THE SHELL TRANSPORT COMPANY AND THEIR SHAREHOLDERS.

Our contemporary, the Financial News, started the city by giving publication to what it purported to be anxiety existing among the general body of the shareholders of the Shell Transport and Trading Company, on account of the fact that the meeting generally held in June, and at which the year's accounts are presented, not yet having been summoned. Seeing the importance which attaches to such a statement, we immediately made exhaustive inquiries upon the matter, and as a result of these we are forced to the conclusion that the statements published in our contemporary are not only incorrect, but, generally speaking, have no foundation in fact. First of all, it must be recalled that the petroleum trade for the past 18 months has suffered considerably, owing mainly to the appearance on the market of large quantities of petroleum products which could not readily be disposed of. There has been over-production in the Far East and other producing countries, the single exception being America, where the supply has not been sufficient to meet the demand. To avoid a crisis in the market in which the Shell Company is so largely interested—a crisis consequent upon the severe competition—protracted negotiations have had to take place, which not only required careful consideration, but the exercise of much patience, for, admittedly, it is no easy matter to bring all the competitive parties into harmonious action. The benefits accruing from such a far-reaching policy as that adopted by the Shell Company could not be felt immediately, though there is no doubt that they, together with the Royal Dutch Company, have rendered yeoman service to the industry of the Far East, in which they are at the head, by carrying through the amalgamation which found expression a few weeks ago in the formation of the Asiatic Petroleum Company.

In all the English Petroleum enterprises there are none which are formed on such a favorable basis to the outside shareholders as the Shell Transport Company. The Original owners of the very important fleet, the 'Shell' line, namely, Messrs M. Samuel and Co., who have been also the owners of very valuable oil concessions in Borneo, as well as predominating partners of the extensive distributing arrangements in the Far East, formed themselves, in 1897, into a company, they taking the value of their properties in ordinary shares to the extent of £1,800,000, of which they are holding at the present time £1,400,000. The effect of this policy alone should be quite sufficient security to all who have deemed it desirable to invest their money in the Shell Transport and Trading Company; for, after all, the outside public are chiefly interested in the preference shares. If the original vendors of most of the English companies would adopt such a policy, namely, to have a large interest in the organisations promoted by them, a great many millions would be preserved for those who have invested their money in the petroleum industry.—The Petroleum Review and Mining News.

Lady Duellists.

An exchange says that Miss Jeanne de Wick and Miss Marguerite Davis fought a duel with salvers in the secluded park of a palace in the Faubourg St. Germain. The ladies, once great chums, had fallen out over a man, or rather two men. Marguerite accused Jeanne of trying to take away her heart, and Jeanne said Marguerite was too friendly with her husband. After a free fight in a boudoir it was decided that the mutual insults could be wiped out with blood only, and a regular duel à la Boni Castellano was decided upon, the fight to cease only after one of the contestants had shed blood. Jeanne, Marguerite, four friends and a female doctor assembled at 5 in the morning and the two ladies stripped to the waist. Only the region of the heart was defended by a strip of coat of mail. They fought five rounds with excellent skill, so the witnesses say, until Jeanne uttered a piercing cry and dropped her foil. At the same time the seconds grabbed Marguerite from behind to prevent her from doing further damage. Jeanne's wound needed three stitches and all the ladies succeeded in catching a few drops of her blood on their handkerchiefs. Young society men are offering from 500 to 1,000 francs for these trophies and the combatants are lionized by society.
